The young singer-songwriter Antoñito Molina (Rota, Cádiz, 1988) loves Carnival, Holy Week, the simple things in life and the culture of his homeland. He became known with the duo El Tren de los Sueños, which he founded in 2006 and belonged to for 12 years until he decided to go solo. He composed his debut album Déjame que te cuente (2017) entirely on his own. In 2020 it was followed by the singles 'Ya no me muero por nadie', 'Dicen que el mundo se acaba' and 'Me estoy volviendo loco', which accumulated more than 7 million plays. Two years later, he released his second album, La ley de mi naturaleza, which includes tracks such as 'Y te voy a querer' and has almost 10 million streams on Spotify. In 2023, he returned to the stage with the tour El club de los soñadores.

With almost 1 million monthly listeners on Spotify, where he is a Top 200 artist, Antoñito Molina continues to grow, having established himself as a new star of Spanish music.

He is currently immersed in his new tour A la Aventura, performing at the main venues and the most important festivals in Spain accompanied by extraordinary musicians and technicians that allow him to give his best live show to date.

Antoñito Molina has received the 2023 Urta de Oro Award, the 2024 Dial Award (New Dial Artist) and the 2024 Bandera de Andalucía Award, among others.
